G. & J. Tires Are First Class.

"The 'G. & J.'—We have been riding a pair of Gormully & Jeffery tires, fitted to the 'G. & J.' wood rim, and can speak of them in no other manner than that in which we have always done. THEY ARE BOTH FIRST-CLASS. A somewhat small, nevertheless important, advantage is the strong valve with which they are fitted, and which enables one to screw the pump directly on, without the employment of the usual India rubber nozzle. Instead of making one's sore, by holding the pump in position, it is only necessary to catch hold of the wheel with one hand and pump away with the other, the effort required being comparatively nothing."—The Cycle Manufacturer and Dealer's Review, Fleet st., London, England, September 28, 1835. HOW DID HE GET IT?

A New Phase in the Mystery of the Holt Will.

MANDEVILLE AN AUTOGRAPH FIEND

He Even Forged a Signature in Order to Secure Another.

FACTS ABOUT HIS MANIA

The question which will henceforth inter est all the parties to the Holt will contro versy in the greatest degree is, where did the late J. R. Mandeville get hold of the mutilated copy of the will of 1873. When young Mr. Orlan Clyde Cullen burst like a meteor across the firmament of mystery which overhung the posthumous affairs of the famous late judge advocate general he cast one gleam of light before he spluttered and went out. This illuminated the hither t) vague and indefinite belief that the will of 1873, naming Miss Throckmorton and Miss Hynes as beneficiaries and Luke Dev lin as executor, had been recovered from attempted destruction, and had by some means found its way into the possession of an autograph collector.

As much of young Mr. Cullen's story a relates to Mr. Mandeville having had the document in his keeping is believed by persons who knew Mr. Mandeville's habits to be true. It is easy to see how a young man of romantic fancy, who had already essayed literary flights by his contributions to an ed literary flights by his contributions to an amateur writers' column, could have come across the disfigured will among the effects of the late Mr. Mandeville, which had come into the possession of the young man's family by reason of an unpaid board bill or other unimportant means, and had been inspired by the discovery to weave a filmy work of fancy that would plunge a curious community into wild excitement, and place him for the time being upon a pinnacle only a few inches lower than the dizzy height occupied by the late and lamented Sherlock Holmes.

Some of Mr. Cullen's Inconsistencies Some of Mr. Cullen's Inconsistencies.

In constructing his chapters, however, young Mr. Cullen, falling into the ways that amateur literati sometimes follow, neglected to study the history of the time and times he had chosen to tell about. For instance, he forgot that at the period in which he professed to be on terms of close intimacy with Judge Holt the latter was a very old man, while he was a very little boy. The fact that Mr. Cullen even at this time is making the amateur department, hereinbefore mentioned, scintillate with his burning thoughts illustrates very forcibly the fact that he could hardly have enjoyed that close personal friendship with Judge Holt which his story would seem to indicate. But that the burned and disfigured document which is now in controversy before the District courts was in the possession of the late J. R. Mandeville and was found among his effects after his demise is regarded by those who have considered the matter as not only reasonable, but highly probable. The fact is that Mandeville was the most obdurate, zealous and uncomproinstance, he forgot that at the period in probable. The fact is that Mandeville was the most obdurate, zealous and uncompromising collector of autographs that it is possible to conceive. When he first came to Washington his short, stout and heavy figure was a familiar and for a long time welcome one at many well-known private houses and public establishments. He pursued each new fad that came along with peculiar pertinactiv and as his methods. peculiar pertinacity, and as his methods and mannerisms began to get him disliked by those who had at first welcomed and then tolerated him, he gave more and more time to the pursuit of his own fancies.

Mandeville as an Autograph Hunter. It was as an autograph collector, however, that Mandeville displayed both his good and his bad traits to the top of his ability. For a number of years and up to 1876 the late Alexander Gardner was one of the leading photographers of Washington. His establishment was on Pennsylvania avenue between 9th and 10th streets, above avor September, 1895, on all bonds surrendered on or before the 1st day of November next.

The holders of stock of the Rock Creek Railway Company of the District of Columbia and the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company are also requested to promptly send in their stock for exchange, according to the terms of the contract aforesaid.

ROUGHT IRON MAKES THE NEWEST AND most artistic Gas Fixtures for Vestibules, Halls, and of work done in connection with his autofused work and the properties of the capital contract aforesaid. Gardner, where he had an immense amount of work done in connection with his autograph mania. This consisted of photographs of documents, reproductions of papers and other things, nearly ail of which were so treated that the sheet upon which they were transferred from the negative would have a margin left at the lower end, according to Mr. Mandeville's instructions, so that room would be left for the writing in of names and signatures. So far did Mandeville go in his desire to secure signatures of illustrious people that he lost the Mandeville go in his desire to secure signatures of illustrious people that he lost the friendship of Mr. Gardner by forging the name of a member of the latter's family to a letter requesting the autograph of a prominent man. It happened that the gentleman addressed was an intimate friend of Mr. Gardner and a frequent visitor at his residence. He knew the member of Mr. Gardner's family whose name had been atached to the communication he received and he took the letter to Mr. Gardner. The latter charged Mandeville with the authorship of the forgery, and upon the latter's attempting to explain it away ordered him out of the photograph gallery.

Mr. Lawrence Gardner's Recollections

Mr. Lawrence Gardner's Recollections "I remember Mandeville very well," said Mr. Lawrence Gardner, the son of the late Alexander Gardner, to a Star reporter to "I was present when my father or dered him out of his establishment for forging the name of one very dear to him to a letter to a well-known public man requesting his autograph. Mandeville was absolutely wrapped up in his mania after autographs. The happening I allude to occurred, I believe, in 1874. I knew Mandeville well, and he was continually having photographic work done at my father's gallery in connection with his craze."

Now, where did Mandeville get that disfigured will? He was known to be a searcher of every junk shop in town and a purchaser of unique documents as long as his money held out. Here is an interesting opportunity for the heirs-at-law of Judge Holt to follow a very clearly defined lead. forging the name of one very dear to him

A CLAIM FOR DAMAGES. A City Post Office Victim Asks for

$20,000. Roland Morgan, a workman engaged in he erection of the new city post office outlding, was severely injured on the 3d of ast August, while at work there. Today, through Attorneys Alphonso Hart and C. Abbut White, he entered suit against Winfield S. Thorp and Charles F. Bond, constructing the iron work in the building. The plaintiff states that on the day in juestion he was in the employ of the de-question he was in the employ of the defendants, and that while at work on the sixth floor of the building their foreman ordered and directed him to climb to the top of a derrick to remove a block and fall. To do so, he says, her was compelled to climb a two-story column and then walk along on an iron girder. In carrying out the order of the foreman it became necessary, he says, for him to take hold of and rest his weight against the derrick. But, he charges, as soon as he attempted to do so, the derrick swung or tipped over to one side and he was hurled downward. A narrow plank saved him from falling through the various floors to certain death. As it was, he suffered a broken hip and was so badly bruised and otherwise injured as to render him, he claims, a gripple for life. He charges that the agcident was due to the fallure of the defendants to lash or fasten the feet of the derrick, or otherwise secure it, and, because of their alleged carelessness and negligence, as well as because of their fallure to provide temporary floors and scaffolding, he claims damages in the sum of $20,000.

The day with them was observed with a big parade in which nearly all of the members of the order participated. The line of march was formed on 12th and D streets southeast, and the knights moved to the avenue and 12th street southeast, through the entire length of the avenue. This evening there will be an entertainment at the Knights of Jerusalem Hall, in South Washington, and there will be speech-making and other kinds of entertainments.

DIFFERENT FATES

Guilty and Innocent in the Police Court.

BEFORE THE JUDGE TODAY

A Lone White Woman Led the Procession.

SHE WAS GUILTY

In the cell set apart for females at the Police Court this morning there were eight colored women and one white woman, all charges, such as drunkenness or disorderly conduct. Some of them had been under the influence of liquor so many times in a month that "habitual drunkard" was the charge preferred against them. Although behind the bars, the women were apparently happy, and seemed just as well contented as those who were in court on the other side of the rail.

Two of the colored women were enjoying smoke when the caterer and Policeman Flynn appeared with hot coffee, rolls and sausage, and when the food and liquid refreshments had disappeared the females arranged their toilet, preparatory to facing

Judge Kimball,

The colored women were particularly anxious to look their best, and, in the absence xious to look their best, and, in the absence of a mirror, they took turns in arranging each other's hair. While this was going on the women laid aside their pipes, but before going into court they made one more effort to purify the atmosphere with smoke from the second-hand tobacco, and then, when all were ready, the door was opened and the order to march given.

Johanna Quill, the only white woman in the party, was in the lead, and behind her walked the colored females and about two dozen men and a few boys.

Johanna's Case. Saturday afternoon Johanna was in South Washington not far from the James Creek canal, but she preferred poisonous whisky to the death trap, and when she was well under the influence of the "poison" she called at a bar room and wanted one more drink.

She was refused, and the proprietor tried to eject her, but she fell to the floor and screamed and kicked to such an extent that Officer Roberts had a hard time to handle her.

"I'm guilty," was her surprising plea when arraigned, and a fine of $5 was imposed.

Lula Taylor, a colored girl who has i.gured in many a court trial, came to the front, and for the first time in her life she front, and for the first time in her life she plead guilty.

"The court fines you five dollars," said the clerk, and Lula could not keep quiet until she got back.

Bailiff Kendig called "Steady!" to the girl, and she managed to get back before it became necessary to impose a fine for contempt.

George Thomas and Joseph Clagett were in court for disorderly conduct. They plead guilty, and the usual fine was imposed.

Sterner Sex. "I'm guilty," was the plea of a colored man arraigned for having used profanity on De Sales street, "but," added the man, "I would like to speak. I live up there, and Saturday I was under the influence of liquor and got arrested. If your honor will take my personal bonds this time I'll do better hereafter, and if you say so, I'll pay the fine nereafter, and if you say so, I'll pay the fine next Monday."

"Can't give you time," said the judge.
"You should have thought of this before you got drunk."
A fine of $5 was imposed, and the man went down.
Afthur Carr, a colored man, was in the procession because he had used profess length.

procession because he had used profane lan-guage in a house loud enough to be heard "I'm guilty of cursing in the house," was say what he desired in his own house. He has, so the court says, but when his bad lan-guage may be heard in the street he is liable

"Five dollars," said the court.

"Did they use the name of the Delty?"
"Yes, sir," answered the officer, "and the man was worse than the woman."
"Judge, your honor," said the man, "I hope you will trust me for a week, and then I'll settle up."
"Why should the court trust you?"
"I'va been summoned as a witness in a

"Why should the court trust you?"
"I've been summoned as a witness in a murder case in the Criminal Court," he answered, "and I just want to 'tend court."
A fine of $5 was imposed and the court took the man's request under consideration.
"This boy," said Policeman Topscott,
"was in a crap game."
Julius Latney was the colored prisoner.

was in a crap game."

Julius Latney was the colored prisoner, and he is only about nine years old.
"Did you see him in the game?" the court "Yes, your honor," said the officer, "and when I appeared he was dropping the bones."
"I was in the alley," said the boy, "but I wasn't in the game."
"What were you doing, then?"

"I stopped where the white boys were playing," he answered, "and one of them was going to buy my knife."
"And you were not in the game?"
"No, sir."
"Ten dollars."

Other Cases. Sysie Trammell, a colored girl, was in the line because she had been disorderly on M street, and she admitted her guilt. She went down because she did not have five dollars. John Gray, a colored man who was on N

John Gray, a colored man who was on N street Saturday night, kicked a cat, and on complaint of Dr. Gibson he got arrested.

"I don't remember that I touched the cat," was the man's defense.

"Was the kick accidental or malicious?" the witness was asked.

"I think it was malicious," was his re-

"Ten dollars."

Joseph Vess, a colored man who was invited to take a glass of beer on the public streets a few nights ago, was in court on a charge of disorderly.

Policeman May complained that the man was in a disorderly crowd near 11th and Q streets, but the man's statement convinced the court that he was not responsible for the disorder, ard he was released.

Elijah Brown had Lawyer Bacon to defend him. He had been arrested for dumping dirt near M street, where he had no right to deposit it.

"He won't do it again," said Lawyer Bacon. "This young man is from the country, and he assures me that he will not repeat the offense."

"Where are you from?" the court asked. "Ten dollars."

'Where are you from?" the court asked Elijah

Slijah.
"Brightwood," he answered.
"Did you ever drive a cart before?"
"Yes, sir; but not out on the dump."
His personal bonds were taken.

ton" Saturday ingit vagrancy. John Jackson, a colored man from Mont-gomery county, a friend of the Georgetown woman, was called to tell of his Saturday night's experience.

He had lost several dollars, but so far as these women were concerned he knew nothing except that Lizzle had assisted him.

The women were released.

William Johnson, an old colored man, was in the procession because he had kept a "speak-easy" at his home in Pleasant al-

"speak-easy" at his home in Pleasant alley.

He plead guilty and was fined $300 or ninety days on the farm.

An old colored woman, called as a witness against Johnson, seemed to be under the influence of liquor, and she sympathized with Johnson in so loud a tone that the court had to call her to order.

"That's the effect of 'speak-easy' whisky," remarked Mr. Pugh. "It lasts a long time, and that's why they like it so well."

Edward Colston, a colored man, cenied that he was a suspicious person.

He was seen on 14th street about 2 a.m. yesterday, and Policeman Hutton said he saw him entering doorways and apparently saw him entering doorways and apparently saw him entering doorways and apparently trying doors.

"I was drurk," said the prisoner, "and I suppose I was looking for bar rooms to get more whisky."

Several policemen were in court who knew the prisoner. They knew he was fond of liquor, but nothing worse was stated against him.

His personal bonds were taken.

DEATH OF JOHN SANFORD.

The Inquest Probably Will Take Place As stated in The Star Saturday, Coroner Hammett decided to further investigate the death of John Sanford, who died recently under suspicious circumstances, upon receiving the report of the chemist who made an analysis of the contents of the stomach of the deceased. As published, arsenic was found, but it was also shown that the poison formed a large proportion of the make-up of the fluid used in embalming the body. Coroner Hammett stated this afternoon that he intends to wait until the arrival in this city from New York of Mrs. Rose Sanford, who claims to be the first wife of the dead man, before holding an inquest. Mrs. Sanford had not reached the city at a late hour this afternoon, but is expected this evening or tomorrow morning, so that "Five dollars," said the court.

Reuben Morton and Louisa Morton, a colored couple from Reed's alley, came next, and they, too, were charged with having been profane in their rouse.

"I heard bad language while passing the house," the officer said.

"Did they use the name of the Deity?" second wives, is to be presented.

> To Keep the Peace On a charge of threatening the life of his wife, Robert Johnson was required by Judge Miller today to give security in the sum of $200 to keep the peace or go down for thirty days.
